Job Titles for Spanish Majors

Graduates in Spanish have a variety of career options in both the public and private sectors. Most professionals who deal with the public, such as teachers, law enforcement agents and social service professionals, benefit from Spanish language knowledge, especially when these professionals serve Spanish speaking communities. Additionally, multi-national corporations increasingly need employees with Spanish language skills to process documents and work as translators. With a major in Spanish individuals have the ability to communicate, develop cultural awareness and sensitivity, expand general knowledge and promote more appreciation of the Spanish culture. Proficiency in more than one language is becoming an increasingly valuable skill and enhances one's occupational possibilities. For information about these and other careers, please go to www.onetonline.org/.
